

Welcome to a Privy!

Entering this structure is not something you likely aspire to; you're here because your body demands it. We know the aroma can be intense and there might be a big, hairy spider crawling around. But, we picked this spot because the soils are appropriate, the location is removed from the water source and, frankly, the digging was not impossible (Maine is blessed with many rocks). So, we thank you for choosing this abode for your business versus dispersed deposits (no matter how inconspicuous) because concentrated use is more sustainable for large numbers of hikers.

To ensure proper conditions, PLEASE:

- Add only human waste and toilet paper to the pile.
- Pack out trash, including feminine hygiene products.
- Do not add food waste.
- Close the lid to keep flies away and reduce the spread of pathogens.
- Latch the door to keep the critters out.

If you have any questions or comments, please contact:

Maine Appalachian Trail Club (MATC)

www.matc.org

campsite@matc.org

